

Purpose

The purpose of this document is to provide an illustration of an RDA application profile and how it may be adapted for local use by a community or institution. In this case, the examples are based on British Library policy and requirements.

Disclaimer

This document is intended to provide a stimulus or focus for discussion. It does not represent the views of RSC nor should it be taken as evidence for future British Library policy or practice. The information was originally created in MS Excel, but for presentational purposes is being made available as pdf.

Scope

The scope of this document is limited to the manifestation. This reflects the limitations on our time not our ambition and work will continue to develop APs for all entities.

Sources of Information

The application profile is derived from the RIMMF4 basic template for manifestation. The RIMMF identifier has been deleted. A few attributes have been added for conformance to APs for minimum description of manifestation entity and Coherent description of information resource. Template information has been supplemented by information from the RDA toolkit; CURIE, domain and range are taken from the element profiles, although in practice this information would be derived from the RDA Registry. Cardinality, VES and Recording methods have also been derived from RDA Toolkit. Information on British Library practice is based on internal documentation.

Hyperlinks

Hyperlinks to RDA Toolkit and external resources have been added to illustrate how the application profile may be adapted to support local workflows. This has not been done comprehensively but can be developed further if it looks like a useful approach.

RDA Application Profile (Manifestation. Basic)

This worksheet provides a view of the information that could be provided in the RDA toolkit as a basis for community development

Local RDA Application Profile (Manifestation. Basic)

This worksheet provides a view of the application profile adapted to the needs to a specific institution, in this case the British Library. It contains the same information as the RDA view, but columns have been hidden. The element labels link to RDA Toolkit pages. Links have also been provided from the local recording method to the relevant instructions in RDA. Manifestation: Other title information, has been added to satisfy local requirements. Note also that the Manifestation: Place of publication element has been repeated in this local view, to support multiple recording methods. Some elements that are not required or not supported by MARC have been hidden.
